Reader's Corner

If you're in the mood for a light, religious fiction read - Lori Copeland's "Love Blooms in Winter" may just fit the bill! Mae is a good intentioned, but perhaps nosy neighbor to aging Pauline. Mae's neighbor has dementia and doesn't have enough money to support herself. While her neighbors do what they can, what Pauline really needs is a family member to look after her. One day Mae discovers that Pauline has a relative - Tom Curtis. Mae writes to Tom and is delighted when he actually appears! Tom intends to care for his relative, but from a distance. On the day when he ready to depart, a train wreck changes his plans. Readers will root for the romance between Mae and Tom as well as fall in love with the town and its quirky residents. This is book 1 in the Dakota Diaries series.
